NEWS RELEASE

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

May 21, 2026

Second Annual North Idaho Women and Their Money Conference Returns June 9th in Coeur d'Alene

Boise, Idaho... The Idaho Department of Finance (IDOF) is pleased to support the second annual North Idaho Women and Their Money Conference, returning to the North Idaho College campus on Tuesday, June 9, 2026. This year's event builds on the momentum of the inaugural conference, bringing together community members, students, and professionals for a full day focused on strengthening financial knowledge, confidence, and long-term financial well-being. A key feature of the conference is the awarding of 40 $1,000 scholarships to North Idaho College, available to eligible attendees through a registration-based drawing.

The conference is free to attend, and participants will have access to a full schedule of expert-led sessions covering investing, credit and debt management, retirement planning, financial goal setting, and other core financial topics. Sessions are designed to provide practical, easy-to-apply information that supports informed financial decision-making at any stage of life.

This year's keynote speaker is Alison Kosik, CFEI, freelance ABC News reporter and anchor, former CNN business correspondent, and author of What's Up With Women and Money? Kosik will discuss financial behaviors, confidence, and long-term planning, with a focus on unique challenges and opportunities women encounter in managing their finances.

The Idaho Department of Finance will participate as an exhibitor and will provide free financial educational materials. Department staff will be available throughout the day to answer questions and talk with attendees. Registration and additional event details are available online at <https://niwatm.com>
